CHAPTER XIX.—Continued.

The lightning expressions that played across the girl's face showed that she was illuming. She turned and flung herself down, leaving the pillow on the floor. "Oh, I know, I know it was horrible, I remembered," she said, shuddering, and burst into tears.

"It was not until an hour later that she languidly asked who sent the roses."

"Colonel Craven," she was told, "the gentleman who brought them."

Evidently she thought this over, for some time later she asked if Colonel Craven was still in Southampton.

"He's staying a few miles out, I think, at his brother's place," said the nurse.

"Do you think they would let me write a note to him?"

"The nurse thought they must wait for that until the doctor came."

He looked in at the evening, and was well satisfied to find the dormant brain at work. The patient was evidently now in a better possession of her faculties than she had been when he first saw her. He wrote to Craven, as follows:—

"I am better. I can remember things now. If you are going to London please go to the letters for Mr. Brown and ask for my letter to him. I am enclosing a note to him. Tell them to give him my love. I have to scurry in making a note of your name, to thank it."

"Thank you for the roses,"

Charles Craven's eyes filled as he read that note. He supposed a catastrophe in Gaeher's married life, and forebode that it might be a permanent one. He was expected to leave, and he did not know where he was, while it seemed better to write to him, than to write to her. He was not sure, but he was sure that she was not in a state to receive a letter from him. He was not sure, but he was sure that she was not in a state to receive a letter from him.

THE STORY OF KOREA.

To the majority of Europeans, the Korea is merely a geographical expression. Although Korea is a country of some 200,000 square miles, it has been the theatre of the most important events in the history of the Far East; although it has been the theatre of the most important events in the history of the Far East, it has been the theatre of the most important events in the history of the Far East.

For our ignorance concerning Korea has been long and deep. China and Japan, for long looked upon Korea as a mere appendage to their empire, and their efforts were directed towards the subjugation of the Korean people. The Korean people, however, have been the theatre of the most important events in the history of the Far East.

MUSIC AND DRAMA.

Some of the strongest attractions of the year have been provided for Melbourne players during the racing carnival. Naturally the Melbourne opera season dominates the theatrical situation, and "La Traviata," "Manon," "Madame Butterfly," and "La Bohème" have crowded Her Majesty's for the week. The casts were, of course, the same as in Sydney. "Faust" is announced for Monday, and "Carmen" for Tuesday.

The J. C. Williamson management has the advantage of a much larger house for the Melbourne season, the seating capacity being 1,500 as compared with 1,000 in Sydney. It is probable that the Melbourne house approximates to the size of Drury Lane theatre, which seats 2,000 people; but the auditorium is much smaller than the Sydney house, which is seated for 1,500.

FIFTY PAGES OF BEAUTIFUL PICTURES!

The Sydney Mail Annual,

NOW READY & ON SALE AT ALL NEWS AGENTS.

ILLUSTRATING OUTDOOR LIFE IN AUSTRALIA.

WITH SUPPLEMENT: "KANGAROO HUNTING IN NEW SOUTH WALES."

Pictures of the Bush. Pictures of the City. Pictures of the Mountains. Pictures of the Plains. Pictures of the Sea-side.

THE ANNUAL is almost entirely pictorial, thus differing from the Christmas Number, with its stories and its budget of holiday sketches. Nearly 50 pages of the Annual are occupied by new and notable pictures, printed in colour, of Australian scenery, or by subject pictures that convey the brightness or some other interesting phase of life in "Out-door Australia." A reference to several of the pages will give some idea of the sunshine that pervades the Number—

Polo: A popular sport all over Australia.

Over the Hurdles: A splendid jumping picture obtained recently at Young.

Sport of Summer Days: Sailing on Sydney Harbour.

Mountain Ponies: The hardy breed of the Monaro.

Fishing: A charming subject picture, entitled "A Maid of the Mountains."

On the Beaches: A set of pictures obtained at Manly and other resorts.

Mountaineering: The best Kosciusko study of the year.

"Benty Possum for Dinner": The Aboriginal before the Camera—a photograph that provokes a smile.

A Papuan Chief: A remarkable picture, showing that the Papuan challenges the Red Indian in picturesque head-dress.

A Papuan Belle: Unique and beautiful study.

Sydney: A view of Bridge-street that gives a good impression of Australian architecture of the city—A Panoramic View of Mosman Bay—A Panoramic View of Circular Quay.

A Bush Harmony: This is a drawing of various Australian bush birds, by A. E. Rosebray, and is sure to be popular.

Cedar-getting in New South Wales: A picture from the Kowmung district.

On Guard: A Study on a New South Wales Ostrich Farm.

A Teamsters' Camp: A picture from the Burrumbidgee Valley.

Majesty and Mystery of the Bush: A photograph of rare quality. This is the finest camera achievement in the Annual.

The Kookaburra: Bush Humourist and Snake Hunter—an exceptional photograph.

A Day in the Life of a Sheepman: A series of six pictures occupying two pages.

Extremes Meet: Study (a drawing), showing a Native Companion and a Blue Wren.

Blooming Time on the Hawkesbury: A pretty orchard scene.

We have mentioned above only half the contents of the Number. The many others include a few of Queensland and Victorian scenery. The Annual thus strikes the Federal note. As a publication to post abroad to enlighten distant friends on the conditions of life in Australia it cannot be excelled.

Note the Coloured Cover, entitled "Wild Flowers." Note the Supplement for framing—"Hunting in New South Wales: On the Trail of the Kangaroo." Note the Date: First Week in November. Note the Price: Sixpence.

and to appoint the gentlemen to be named by them. I shall leave a little time open for them. If they will make a move in this direction themselves, this Court has power to take the responsibility to make the recommendations itself, which will be for the purpose of receiving nominations from the members. I will put this matter in the list for Friday next."

"HE'S AT WORK."

THE UNION PRESIDENT.

HAS NOT JOINED THE STRIKERS.

A "Herald" reporter yesterday made an effort to interview Mr. E. H. Miller, president of the Sydney Wharf-labourers' Union, the members of which are all on strike at the deep-sea, inter-lake, and coastal wharfs. All with the exception of one, and that one the president, as Mr. Miller is not a wharf-labourer, but a Postal Department employee.

The reporter first searched for the president alone the wharf, thinking he might perhaps be there playing the strikers with advice to return to work, or, may be, to fight on "for the good of the cause." But the most diligent endeavours failed to discover the president amongst the ranks and file of strikers along the foreshore of the port. So the reporter turned his footsteps towards the headquarters of the union by the name of the "Herald" building, where groups of wharf-labourers outside on the footpaths, thronging the passage-way, and packing the rooming houses, were to be seen. He would run him to each of these.

An inquiry at the reporter going upstairs to the sanctum sanctorum of the union. Here, in the steering room, so to speak, of the organization, the president might be found at this critical period in the affairs of the union, with its 4000 members out of work. He would be interviewed was again disappointed.

A knock at the door elicited a response, "Come in." "Is the president, Mr. Miller, here?" was answered by the three occupants of the room in the negative.

"Can you tell me," proceeded the reporter, "whether the Rules of the Sydney Wharf-labourers' Union provide for anybody who is not a wharf-labourer holding the office of president?"

The three occupants looked blankly at the questioner, who then repeated his query, in which he then thought he had been misled. "The president of the Sydney Wharf-labourers' Union," he said, "is not a wharf-labourer, but a Postal Department employee."

"Can I see Mr. Miller any time to-day here?" asked the reporter.

"No," was the answer.

"Why cannot I see Mr. Miller?" asked the reporter.

"Because he does not come here in the day. He is at work," was the reply.

And the reporter then entered into the night after rubbing shoulders with the strikers, who, either from principle or from a desire to get their own way, were about, and fighting the strike battle by inflicting loss, for the time being at all events, on themselves.

"He's at work" still rang in the reporter's ears.

"OUTVOTED."

DEEP-SEA MEN COMPLAIN.

WHEELS WITHIN WHEELS.

"I want you to put in your paper, that all the deep-sea men in the 'Herald' have come to the meeting at the Town Hall on Saturday morning," said a unionist yesterday.

He was one of the deep-sea men, and felt that he and a lot of others had been tricked by the unionist on Wednesday.

"You see," he continued, "there are nearly 500 of our deep-sea men, and we were out at the meeting. There were nearly 2000 coastal and inter-lake men, and a lot of our deep-sea men, and we were outvoted. We didn't want to strike. We've got no grievance. There is no dispute. We want to work."

The speaker drew hieroglyphics in the air with a black pen, and then stated that a lot of our deep-sea men, and we were outvoted. We didn't want to strike. We've got no grievance. There is no dispute. We want to work.

of the Sydney Wharf-labourers' Union in ignoring the present agreement will leave a stigma for all time upon the shoulders of organized labour. I am, W. J. SANDS.

THE TRANNY OF TRADES UNIONS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir—I read this in a recently published book, "The Clipper Ship Era." "No people except the English in courage and resource in times of national trouble, and no endeavoring fought the battle for freedom of speech, freedom of the press, freedom of slaves, freedom of trade, and so on."

As a rule matches between New South Wales and Queensland do not create as much interest as the triangular contest between the mother State and Victoria and South Australia, for the reason that Queensland has not produced cricketers of the standard as the Southerners, and the matches that have been played of late years have not been against the strongest New South Wales eleven.

Queensland has won five out of seven matches, and as a result the team selected to represent New South Wales in the present tour is, of necessity, a fairly representative one.

A more unoriginal day for cricket could hardly be imagined, a bitterly cold southerly gale sweeping up the ground causing the fieldsmen to don guernseys, the spectators to seek secluded spots, and the chroniclers to retire behind glass partitions.

Yet, despite the wintry conditions, a most interesting day's cricket was witnessed, the batting of the New South Wales representative being of a generally high standard, whilst the outcries of the Queenslanders were loud and desperate.

The batting was of a brilliant description may be judged from the fact that 425 runs were scored in the first innings, the rate of 4-1-3 runs per over, yet during the first hour of play the bowling of Barton and McLaren was of a very high character.

For the first time since the outbreak of the war, the batting of the New South Wales representative was of a high standard, whilst the outcries of the Queenslanders were loud and desperate.

For the first time since the outbreak of the war, the batting of the New South Wales representative was of a high standard, whilst the outcries of the Queenslanders were loud and desperate.

The batting was of a brilliant description may be judged from the fact that 425 runs were scored in the first innings, the rate of 4-1-3 runs per over, yet during the first hour of play the bowling of Barton and McLaren was of a very high character.
